Export and convert the CA Burp The first step is to get the CA Burp in the right format. To get around this, we plan to: Unmount the Apk Add a New XML Resource to Define a Network Security Profile Edit AndroidManifest.xml Repackaging and Self-Signing The APK Unmount and Modify the APK Start Using APKTOOL to Disassemble the APK Next, Add an APK New Network Security Configuration by Creating the network_security_config.xml File in the res / xml Directory: 1 Vim TestApp \res \xml\networkwork_security_config.xml The configuration must explicitly state that 'Â' is acceptable that the Cert trusted user Now 'Â' you can configure the proxy and start exception of any and all app traffic with Burp .) Mofieying and Repackaging An app if you have no root or do not want to modify trusted system certificates, you Can' install Burp CA as certifying user and then modify the specific APK you want MITM. 1 2 3 ADB root adb Remount adb Push .0/ sdcard / The just drop into a shell shell adb) and move the file to / system / etc / security / cacerts and chmod it to 644: 1 2 mv / sdcard / 0 / system / etc / security / cacerts / chmod 644 /system/etc/security/cacerts/0 Finally, we must restart the device with ADB restart A power cycle. If we have root privileges, you can write in this position and release the BURP CA (after some changes). He also added the advantage of not having to set a lock pin :) Change the manifest and repack the app. Before going further, all the information I needed 'A was found in these great writings: Starting with Nougat, Android changed the default behavior of the trusted user's installed certificates. The entire content should be: 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 Finally, we need to define the network Config Security in AndroidManifest.xml. Starting with Nougat, apps will ignore user-installed certificates by default. I burned a whole afternoon solving the problem and decided to write what I found and two different ways that I understood. Install Burp CA as a trusted system level Since the 'Â' 'â'traditional'Â' 'â'y mode of installing a user certificate no longer works'1 in Nougat and above, for me the simplest 'A' solution' install the Burp CA to the trusted certificate system. Trusted CAS for Android 'A' stored in a special format in / system / etc / security / cacert. Background I've done a lot of Android testing in the past and my configuration usually involves a genymotion VM or my old nexus tablet rooted. In the tag, add the Android: NetworkSecurityConfig attribute pointing to new XML file: 1 Android: AllowBackup = "True" Android: NetworkSecurityConfig = "@ xml / network_security_config" ... etc ...-> Reassemble and Sign Finally, the APK must now be rebuilt and signed to be installed.
